“ The loss of a loved one is made especially hard by the loss of a young man with so much potential. But, the hour is coming in which all those in the memorial tombs will hear Jesus voice and come out to a resurrection of life in a better world. God is close to those crushed in spirit and promises to be with them and bless them with a life without pain, tears, mourning nor any reason for sadness. Evil men will be done away with and those hoping in the Lord will possess the earth and live on it forever in peace. May we take comfort in the comfort we receive from God.

“ Wayne was oldest of my two younger brothers. To be honest, I wasn't very happy when he came along when I was 2.5 years old because I wanted to keep our mom all to myself. We fought heroically as children and he could throw some monster temper tantrums, but we always had each other's backs against the outside world and we loved each other. When we got older, I truly treasured how much he loved me, how kind and gentle he could be while remaining strong, his sense of humor and ability to laugh at himself, and his deep love for his family and animals. I never thought he would die so young and I miss him so much right now.

“ Wayne was my first teenage love . We had some bad memories but there were many more good ones. And although it has been many years, He has always had a place in my heart . I can't believe your gone . You will be truly missed Wayne.
